Hi Vicente! I have finished reviewing your report cards (sorry it took so long) and no changes are suggested. Thank you for your positive comments to parents about what their child can do and how to keep helping them at home – great suggestions! Your students are making progress in all areas and I noticed that many know most letters/sounds ... keep up the great work!

I'm sure the parents listening in on my reading lessons had something to do with it. I just really focused on the strategies and explained why the strategies work to the "kids". I think the parents learned some things as well! Although one of those students on D was always on her own! I often heard parents in the background telling them to "stretch it out", etc.

That's AMAZING Patty! More than half of your students have an independent reading level with four of those at a level B and three of those at a level D ... all done virtually! I haven't seen anyone with that many level D's! I'm so very PROUD of YOU!

Hi Haley! I have finished reviewing your report cards and no changes are suggested. Thank you for your positive comments to parents about what their child can do and for sending home a folder with some suggestions on what they can do over the summer for literacy and math support. I noticed that most of your students are using visual cues to make word connections and beginning to apply letter sounds in their writing. Also, 3 of your students have an independent reading level (one at a level B)! You've prepared them well for K!
